Short Term Program

Nov. 26-Dec 18, 2006

Amsterdam-Brussels-Barcelona

Three Cities ... One Program

Why study abroad in Amsterdam, Brussels and Barcelona?

The understanding and appreciation of other cultures are essential components of a liberal arts education at DePaul University. Study abroad gives you an exciting opportunity to learn about other cultures and provides an international perspective that you will need in order to compete successfully in today’s global society. Whatever your field of study or future career plans, you will live and work in an internationally integrated, interdependent and competitive environment. Preparing yourself for tomorrow is one of the most serious challenges you face as a student today.

The study of Amsterdam, Brussels and Barcelona is designed to focus on progressive municipal policies that have made these cities distinctive and innovative in addressing urban problems.

The programs is also designed to broaden and deepen your intellectual and cultural horizons.

Student Comments

My visit was only a series of glimpses into another way of life. At the same time, it has influenced my perspective on the world. While experiences may not be authoritative, it has no equal, and I am grateful for the opportunity to simply be in other countries.

Emily Minkin, 2004

I ’am graduating in six months and moving on to the next stage of my life... My love of traveling and experiencing new cultures and ideas has been resoundingly affirmed on this trip.

Paul Hogan, December ,2003

This experience opened my eyes to so many places and ideas. Each city or even an area we visited gave me a new perspective on my study in Europe and my life back in Chicago.

Ellen Mickes, December, 2002
