B.S. in Health Sciences

Learning Outcomes

Students will be able to:

- Demonstrate effective communication skills and work collaboratively with individuals and populations of varied perspectives.
- Evaluate both natural and social science research as it applies to individual and population health.
- Explain and understand foundational biological principles related to human health.
- Understand and apply the scientific method and evidence-based approaches to human health.
- Identify and analyze ethical issues in research, health, and public health.
- Identify and understand how social determinants influence an individual’s health and create health disparities.
- Identify the core concepts and principles of public health and apply them to the promotion of health and prevention of disease.
- Describe the components of health policy and health care systems both domestically and globally.