B.A. in Philosophy

Learning Outcomes

Philosophy undergraduate majors can:

- Critically discuss philosophical issues (via well-grounded arguments) and questions from the perspectives of multiple methods, traditions, and historical contexts.

- Evaluate philosophical issues, questions, and problems critically and analytically.

- Write and articulate and a well-ordered essay presenting philosophical positions in a way that addresses philosophical issues and questions.

- Formulate and evaluate their own understanding of a diverse range of philosophical problems, in both writing and discussion.

- Integrate a critical understanding of central philosophical ideas from the history of philosophy, broadly construed to include more than the Western tradition.
