B.A. Leadership Studies

Learning Outcomes

Students should be able to:

• Demonstrate an ability to analyze contemporary models and theories of organizational leadership.

• Demonstrate an understanding of the symbiotic relationship between organizational communication, leadership and work culture.

• Demonstrate an interpretation of statistical data and ability to critique their validity in terms of the questions and hypotheses underlying them.

• Demonstrate an identification and application of effective group dynamics principles, and connection of these to patterns to meaning and identity.

• Demonstrate an ability to analyze case studies of organizational change using relevant theoretical models and concepts.

• Demonstrate an articulation of the impact of language and discourse on attitudes, action, and identity formation in the professions.

• Demonstrate an understanding and articulation of central principles of productive organizational development.

Last Update: 2014