The Office for Teaching, Learning and Assessment is utilizing LibraryThing – an online catalogue to manage our always growing collection of texts that explore the relationships between teaching, learning and assessment. We are excited to share our books with the DePaul University community. You can easily search and view our collection by following the steps below:

STEP 1
Type your search criteria in the bar titled “Search this library” in the top right corner. You can also search by author, title, subject or tag by clicking on the down arrow next to the “Search” button.

STEP 2
The search pictured to the right was for all books with the tag “rubrics.” You can learn more about each individual result by clicking on the book title.

STEP 3
When you click on a book title you will be taken to a screen that contains information on the title, including user reviews, tags, and books that are similar to the one you’ve selected.

STEP 4
If you would like to borrow books from our library, you can either visit our office, which is located in Lewis 1300, during normal business hours, or, if there is a specific volume of interest, email us at tla@depaul.edu to request it via inter-office mail. Our staff will be happy to help you find books in our library—or any other resources—you might need!
