SEMINAR C4: The Economics of AI Use in the Classroom

ROOM 8005

Presenter: Caleb Lewis, Aurora University.

For many students, the inappropriate use of AI to produce content for assignments and projects is rational. Students make decisions based on the benefits and costs of competing uses of their time. The best approach to reducing this behavior is likely not prohibition, but rather manipulating the cost and benefit analysis. Further, the use of AI may be complementary to learning outcomes in the class. This session will discussion features of course and assignment design and pedagogical uses of AI. Participants are invited to bring an assignment or project from their class to discuss in the workshop.
